Fr. Kevin's Reflection

In a previous reflection, I wrote about gratitude. Of all the passions man has ... the passion of gratitude lasts only about two hours ... then is diminishes almost out of existence. (Now ... contrast gratitude's passion with the passion of anger ... anger can last a lifetime ... and rarely goes out of existence.) We get an idea of what God's sees from man far too often when it comes to showing Him gratitude ... and because gratitude is so short lived ... it kind of explains why we do what we do during weekend Sunday Mass.

What does worship really mean? How is it different from the circle of giving and receiving that characterized the pre-Christian world of worship? Before turning to this question, I should like to refer to the text that concludes the giving of the ceremonial law in the book of Exodus. It is constructed in close parallel to the account of creation. Seven times it says, "Moses did as the Lord had commanded him" (words that suggest that the seven-day work on the tabernacle replicates the seven-day work on creation). The account of the construction of the tabernacle ends with a kind of vision of the Sabbath. "So Moses finished the work. Then the cloud covered the tent of meeting, and the Glory of the Lord filled the tabernacle" (cf. Ex 40:33). The completion of the tent anticipates the completion of creation. God makes His dwelling in the world. Heaven and earth are united.

(In this connection (speaking of "creation") allow me a side note to add: that in the Old Testament, the verb "bara" has two, and only two, meanings. First, it denotes the process of the world's creation, the separation of the elements, through which the cosmos emerges out of chaos. Secondly, it denotes the fundamental process of salvation history ... the election and separation of pure from impure, and therefore the inauguration of the history of God's dealings with men. (How we are to worship Him ... pure and perfect.) Thus begins the spiritual creation, the creation of the covenant, without which the created cosmos would be an empty shell.)

Creation and history, creation, history and worship are in a relationship of reciprocity. (All three inter-linked and mutually working together for a mutual benefit.) Creation looks toward the covenant, but the covenant completes creation and does not simply exist along with it. Now if worship (rightly understood) is the soul of the covenant, then it not only saves mankind but is also meant to draw the whole of reality (all of creation) into communion with God. Unlike the tenants of the vineyard in this week's Gospel ... we cannot separate creation, history and worship without harming the others.)

Roe v. Wade

The term "September 11th" has become a household phrase, representing a great tragedy when innocent people were callously murdered to further a selfish political agenda.

Yet another date, January 22nd, which in not nearly as well known, marks perhaps the most tragic day in our country's history, anniversary of the U. S. Supreme Court's decision of Roe v. Wade, which somehow found in our Constitution the phantom "right" to have the innocent child in the womb aborted.

Since that decision in 1973, over 60 million babies have been aborted in the U.S.—a number which far exceeds all the Americans killed in all the wars combined since our nation was founded.

Polls show that the majority of people do not realize the full implications of the ROE decision—for example, that the child can be aborted for any reason (or indeed no reason) throughout the entire nine months of pregnancy. The ignorance relative to Roe is by design. It is intentionally fueled by disinformation in the media.

Fortunately, both science and technology has advanced since 1973 so it is becoming increasingly difficult for the abortion industry to conceal and disguise the truth. For instance, 3D and 4D ultrasounds now provide a window into the womb, which clearly shows the humanity of the child and renders absurd their previous claim that "it" was "only a blob of tissue".

Knowledge is power, and as more people gain knowledge about Roe v. Wade, the less power the multi-billion dollar abortion industry maintains, despite its every effort to mislead us and the young mothers whom they seek as clients.
