Just a bit from Fr. Schmidt

"I will praise the Name of my God with song and magnify Him with thanksgiving" (Psalm 69:30).

You may have noticed that I often attempt to sing quite a bit of the Mass. I do so not only because I enjoy singing, but also because this is what the liturgy itself calls for, especially at higher feasts. A common misconception that still persists today is that we're supposed to just "sing at Mass," meaning that we just sing songs or hymns at different points, on the way in, at the middle, during Communion, and on the way out. The ideal, though, is to actually sing the Mass.

One way that the Church encourages us to sing the Mass is by giving a hierarchy of which parts should always be sung when things like the Alleluia or Responsorial Psalm is sung. The parts that are primary (meaning they should be sung whenever there is singing during the entrance, Offertory, and Communion) include most of the dialogue parts ("The Lord be with you," etc.), the Collect, the Prayer over the Offerings, and the Prayer after Communion (which are different at different Masses), the Preface and Sanctus, the Doxology at the end of the Eucharistic Prayer, the Our Father with the parts surrounding it, and "The Peace of the Lord." Other parts may be sung, but if they are, then all the parts I just listed as primary should also be sung (Cf. Musicam Sacram 1967, 28-29).

The goal of actually singing the Mass instead of just singing at Mass is also why I sing the Entrance and Communion antiphons out of the Missal, because these are actually what is proper to each Mass. There's also an Offertory antiphon proper to the Mass that's not found in the Missal. These antiphons are designed to be sung as a refrain between verses of the Psalms, much like the Responsorial Psalm during the Liturgy of the Word.

St. Augustine says, "A song is a thing of joy; more profoundly, it is a thing of love" (Sermo 34). I realize that many do not yet experience much joy or love for this type of singing, especially since all of us are not necessarily gifted as singers, but I appreciate your patience and participation. An ancient proverb says, "Whoever sings well prays twice over," but even if you can't sing well, I'm sure the Lord—who gave you your voice—likes to hear you try.

Fr. Schmidt
