Word of Life

"We are called to reverence and love every human person as ourselves. It is our responsibility to care for and protect human life, especially the lives of the most vulnerable among us. The Gospel of Life teaches us that 'the task of accepting and serving life involves everyone; and this task must be fulfilled above all towards life when it is at its weakest'" (EV43).

Our Lady of Guadalupe, Patroness of the unborn, pray for us.
 St. Joseph, patron of the unborn, pray for us.

Associated Crafts from of Winona, Minnesota arrived this week in Bowdle and have completed work on the stained glass windows on the west side of St Augustine Church. The cost came to $22,065. If you have the opportunity, check out the work that has been done.

Note: Melissa has taken an unexpected medical leave from the office. A close family member has taken ill with Covid forcing her to quarantine at home. She will continue to take another week off and should be back again with regular office hours on October 27. If you have anything for the bulletin please leave a voicemail or email. Sorry for the inconvenience.

Just a bit from Fr. Schmidt

Valued at 1000 Words

One of the most striking features of Rome besides the thousands of years of history is the beauty of its art and architecture. When I was in college, I had the opportunity to spend a semester abroad, and even after just a few months, one of my classmates commented on that as being one of the things he would miss most. Walking down pretty much any street, even the regular buildings were beautiful, often with stylized framing of each window. Many churches still have the original works of some of the best artists of all time.

We are blessed to have very beautiful churches here in these parishes that hopefully help us to raise our minds and hearts to God. I often think visual aids to prayer are often overlooked. Eastern churches tend to have a much stronger tradition of using icons when they pray and worship. Definitely closing our eyes and making use of our imagination can be a valuable way to pray as well, but if our imagination is undisciplined, it can also lead us straight into distraction.

I know as a more visual person myself, I've often found it helpful to have an image—a statue, or painting—that I can return to if I find my attention starting to wander. Even if it's just a crucifix or an image on a holy card that I use as a bookmark or in a small pamphlet on the Rosary, having an image with me is a great help against distractions. They might be a little big for this purpose, but I often think those collections of religious art that serve as coffee table books would be excellent aids to our prayer.

St. John of Damascus and many others were fierce defenders of sacred art, that as the invisible God became visible and revealed His Sacred Face to us in the features of Christ's human nature, so Christians have not only the right, but the sacred duty to reveal His Face not only in words but also in the visual arts. We are not angels. We are body and soul, and all our physical senses can be either a help or a hindrance to prayer and meditation. Why not use them to our advantage to help us lift our minds and hearts to God and to contemplate the mysteries of our redemption in Christ? If you've never or only rarely attempted using images as aids to prayer and as safeguards against distraction, I cannot more highly recommend the practice.
